Getting Started The first few minutes after launching Photoshop are essential to learning how to use this software. This is because you will need to find tutorials in this program. To access the online tutorials, press and hold the Ctrl key and clicking on the plus sign to the right of the title bar. When Photoshop loads, a message box will appear, asking whether or not you wish to open Photoshop as an administrator. Click the Yes button to launch Photoshop as an administrator in Windows; leave the field blank to launch the software as a standard user in Mac. Once Photoshop loads, you will see Photoshop's main screen displayed. You will also see a drop down menu to the right of the title bar. This menu is where you access all of Photoshop's views, which we will go over in detail below. You should now know the difference between Photoshop's various views, and how to access each from the drop down menu. The most important area of Photoshop is the main screen, where all editing takes place. To open the main screen, click the File menu, then the Open or Load menu, and choose Open or Load from the Photoshop menu that appears. Alternatively, you may press Command+O (Option+O) on your keyboard. The main menu is displayed when you click the File menu and Load from the Photoshop menu. In Photoshop, you can work on a layer-by-layer basis, so that you can easily customize a project any way you want. To create a new layer, simply click the New Layer icon at the top of the main screen and draw a rectangle. To move the active layer to a new layer, click on the New Layer icon, then choose Move Layer to New Layer. It is also a good idea to apply an "active" mark to your currently open file or image to ensure that you can identify it later on. To mark your currently active layer as active, click the small square icon below the Layers icon. This will change the color of the layer to yellow. You can also move, copy and duplicate layers by clicking and dragging these icons. You can create a new layer to work on, and you can move and copy existing layers to create a new project. You can also copy or duplicate layers. To create a new layer, click the New Layer icon in the lower right hand corner, or press Command+Shift+N (Command+Option+N). To move a layer, click and

Q: How to properly integrate AngularJS(2) with NodeJS(Express)? I'm learning NodeJS now. My question is how to proper integrate AngularJS(2) with NodeJS(Express) to get an idea of how the foundation(NodeJS + Express) works. I want to know how to integrate them, not Angular(2) with NodeJS(Express) framework. A: your very first step should be to get a node.js framework, such as express, but for this question, you should know that Express is an API made by adding middlewares to the routes provided by Node.js. The middlewares is what middleware is about, which transforms the request and prepares them to handle your react code Then you should read documentation of the API you are using, and practice creating the API before using it with your Angular2 code. Here is a great tutorial to get you started

The Internet is a worldwide collection of millions of computers and computer networks that are linked together through various communications media. The Internet is based on the TCP/IP suite of protocols, and is currently growing at a rate of hundreds of millions of people every day. The World Wide Web (WWW) is a specific implementation of the Internet. The WWW is a client/server-based navigation system, and it is the most successful information-dissemination system in history. The Web is a system for accessing linked information—that is, documents, media, and other resources located on different computers. The Web is, essentially, the Web Browser. The Web Browser is a special-purpose software program that runs on the user's computer to navigate the Web. A web browser is able to communicate with Web servers and Web files. A web browser makes a request from a web server for information and receives a response with data files. A web server is a type of host computer on the Internet that provides resources such as documents or multimedia files for retrieval by other computers. Web servers offer their services to the public by providing a “Web site.” The Internet is made up of a distributed system of thousands upon thousands of computers and communication networks that are linked together.
